

Scene

30 Years of FASHION & TV

The hottest fashion trends on television from the past three decades influenced the 2009 runways

YVES SAINT LAURENT

1975

WONDER WOMAN TREND: superhero cinch Designers at Yves Saint Laurent and Roberto Cavalli both offered up an action-packed take on the bustier. They must have been watching Lynda Carter spin around on TV when the Wonder Woman series ran from 1975-79.

GIVENCHY

1981

DYNASTY TREND: showstopping shoulders To match the big hair, big jewelry and big attitude, Dynasty's most memorable villainess, Alexis Carrington (played by Joan Collins), wore quarterback-padded pieces that have been beautifully revamped by Givenchy and Marc Jacobs (among many others).

SCENE

1982

FAME TREND: nude tights and leg warmers Maison Martin Margiela kicked off a collection filled with enough nude body-suits and dancewear-inspired looks to suit the performing arts academy. Fame was also on the mind at Chanel, where models wearing pink leg warmers strutted "I want to live forever" accessories down the legendary label's catwalk.

CHANEL

BOTTEGA VENETA

2007

MAD MEN TREND: sexy secretary Just when you thought the sexy secretary look was on its way to the shredder, Mad Men comes along and inspires designers (Donatella Versace and Michael Kors are both big fans) to love '60s office wear again. Exhibit A: Bottega Veneta's fall line looks as stylish as a staff party at Sterling Cooper.

GOSSIP GIRL TREND: haute hairbands

Taking cues from Gossip Girl's Serena van der Woodsen (Blake Lively) and Blair Waldorf (Leighton Meester), hairbands were the cherries on top of Jason Wu's, Calvin Klein's and Zac Posen's catwalks this fall.

ZAC POSEN

GIVENCHY

ALEXANDER WANG

1984

MIAMI VICE TREND: shaded blazers Alexander Wang's Spring '09 collection was an ode to Miami Vice. Pink blazers with rolled-up sleeves and pink and blue palettes ruled his runway.

THE COSBY SHOW TREND: menswear maiden When Denise Huxtable (aka Lisa Bonet) descended on TV-land, she fearlessly flaunted a closet filled with trends—namely, harem pants and a plethora of boyfriend jackets—both of which recently made a stylish reappearance at Stella McCartney and Balmain.

STELLA MCCARTNEY

1998

SEX AND THE CITY TREND: killer heels SJP introduced the world to footwear design genius Manolo Blahnik during her star turn as the sex columnist-cum-stylista known as Carrie Bradshaw. Shoe closets haven't been the same since.

PHOTOGRAPHY: ANTHEA SIMMS (RUNWAY); GOSPIP GIRL, MAD MEN: KEYSTONE PRESS AGENCY (MIAMI VICE); GLOBE PHOTOS (LISA BONET)